Getting around

- The centre is small and walked on foot, but it is all slopes and steps: the route on the map starts in Atrani, about 10 minutes east along the coast road, and ends up the Valle dei Mulini at the Paper Museum.
- Public lifts climb from Piazza Municipio to the Cimitero Monumentale in about a minute.
- SITA Sud buses leave from Piazza Flavio Gioia on the seafront: to Ravello and Scala (some runs through Pontone), to Positano and Sorrento, to Maiori and Salerno, and to Agerola. Ferries leave from the piers beside Marina Grande.
- The path from Amalfi up the Valle dei Mulini to the Valle delle Ferriere was closed by a town order in April 2022 after a landslide, and no order lifting it has been published; start from Pontone. Amalfi has no railway station: trains run from Salerno and Sorrento.
- Paper maps and timetables: the information points are listed on https://touristoffice.org/amalfi-tourist-office/

About this map

The sights, photos and descriptions come from touristoffice.org/amalfi/, where each sight has opening details and a longer guide. Addresses come from OpenStreetMap. The walking route was computed with the Valhalla pedestrian profile; its time adds the climb along the way (Tobler's hiking function over a terrain model) and excludes the visits. The Amalfi Coast map draws the SS163 and the Path of the Gods from OpenStreetMap and the Path of the Lemons with the same Valhalla profile; its ferry lines are schematic. Hours and access change, check before you go. Edition: November 2026.

The 11 top sights

In walking order, with the full address of each one. Red numbers are worth a separate trip: they sit outside the centre, so the line below each one gives the transport to use.

1 Atrani

Atrani

Atrani fills a small cove just east of Amalfi, its houses stacked up the valley of the Dragone stream around a square that opens onto the beach through an old passage. The doges of Amalfi were invested in its church of San Salvatore de Birecto, and the village has kept its lanes, vaulted stairways and lemon terraces almost untouched, along with a quieter beach than Amalfi's. A short walk along the coast road or through the tunnel path links it with Amalfi.

2 Marina Grande and the seafront

The harbour

Marina Grande is the widest beach in Amalfi, two minutes from the cathedral and the shops, and boats to Positano, Capri and the Emerald Grotto leave from the pier beside it. On the seafront, Piazza Flavio Gioia holds Alfonso Balzico's bronze of the navigator studying a compass. Flavio Gioia is now seen as a misreading of a Latin text printed in 1511, though Amalfi sailors were among the early users of the compass in the Mediterranean.

3 Arsenale della Repubblica

The harbour

Documented since 1042, the Arsenale is where the Republic of Amalfi built and repaired its war galleys. Two aisles of pointed arches on 10 stone piers survive over about 40 metres. The Museo della Bussola e del Ducato Marinaro inside shows finds from the sea, the Tabula de Amalpha maritime code, tarì coins from the Amalfi mint, early compasses and a model of the medieval town. The Visit Amalfi infopoint is based here.

4 Piazza Duomo

Piazza Duomo

Medieval Amalfi called its main square the Platea Nova, laid out in the late 13th century when the Canneto stream was covered over, and shops have lined it ever since. In the square stands the Fountain of Sant'Andrea of 1760, a Baroque group of the Apostle above a siren, a satyr and a dove, moved here from the foot of the cathedral steps in 1869. The former seminary across the square still carries a sundial on its facade, and cafe tables fill the square below the steps.

5 Amalfi Cathedral (Duomo di Sant'Andrea)

Piazza Duomo

Duke Mansone I founded the cathedral in 987, and the relics of the Apostle Andrew, brought from Constantinople in 1208, rest in its crypt. Sixty-two steps climb from the square to bronze doors cast in Constantinople and donated in 1060 by the merchant Pantaleone de Comite Maurone. The striped facade, with mosaics on designs by Domenico Morelli, replaced a Baroque front that partly collapsed in 1861 and was finished in 1891.

6 Cloister of Paradise and Diocesan Museum

Piazza Duomo

Archbishop Filippo Augustariccio commissioned the cloister in 1268 as a burial ground for Amalfi's nobles. Interlaced pointed arches rest on 120 slender paired columns around a garden of palms, and the chapels of noble families open off the walks, one with a fresco attributed to the Neapolitan school of Giotto. The visit continues into the 9th-century Basilica of the Crucifix, home of the Diocesan Museum and the cathedral treasury, and down to the crypt.

7 Paper Museum and the Valle dei Mulini

Valle dei Mulini

The Valle dei Mulini follows the Canneto stream up from the centre through lemon gardens and old mills. Paper making is documented here from the 13th century, and 16 paper mills were still working when the flood of November 1954 struck. The Museo della Carta, opened in 1969 in a former mill, keeps its water-driven machines running, and guided visits let each visitor make a sheet of cotton paper by hand.

8 Valle delle Ferriere

Scala

Behind Amalfi, the Canneto stream runs through a deep valley named after the medieval ironworks that forged nails for the republic's ships. Since 1972 part of it has been a nature reserve, in the comune of Scala, where waterfalls and a humid microclimate shelter ferns from the Cenozoic such as Woodwardia radicans and the rare spectacled salamander. The path starts above the Museo della Carta, and heavy rain can close sections.

9 Torre dello Ziro

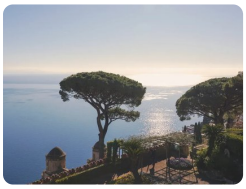

Pontone, Scala

The round Torre dello Ziro crowns the ridge between Amalfi and Atrani, the keep of a castle above Pontone, in the comune of Scala. It may rebuild a tower recorded in 1151 and was repaired several times up to 1480. Tradition sets here the imprisonment and death of Giovanna d'Aragona, Duchess of Amalfi, and her children in the early 16th century. Restored in 2006, it is reached on foot from Pontone or Atrani, with views over both towns and the coast.

10 Villa Rufolo

Ravello

Villa Rufolo faces the cathedral square of Ravello, built in the 13th century by the merchant Rufolo family. Its Moorish cloister and the Torre Maggiore, now a vertical museum, recall their wealth. The Scot Francis Nevile Reid bought the villa in 1851 and replanted its terraced gardens, where Richard Wagner, visiting on 26 May 1880, found the magic garden of Klingsor for Parsifal. The Ravello Festival holds concerts on its belvedere.

11 Villa Cimbrone

Ravello

Villa Cimbrone stands on the rocky spur of Cimbronium in Ravello, a property recorded since the 11th century. Ernest William Beckett, later Lord Grimthorpe, bought it in 1904 and rebuilt villa and gardens with battlements, terraces and a cloister in Gothic, Moorish and Venetian styles. An avenue crosses the gardens to the Terrace of Infinity, a belvedere lined with marble busts high above the Gulf of Salerno. The villa is now a hotel.

Neighbourhoods

Piazza Duomo and the main street
Piazza Duomo (4) is the heart of the town, below the steps of the cathedral (5) and the entrance to the Cloister of Paradise (6). The main street climbs north from the square past shops and cafes, with the vaulted Supportico Rua running beside it.

The Valle dei Mulini
North of the centre the Canneto stream runs down a narrow valley once lined with paper mills. The Paper Museum (7) keeps one of them working, and the valley climbs on towards the reserve of the Valle delle Ferriere (8).

Pogerola and Pontone
Pogerola, a hamlet of Amalfi, looks down on the town from the north-west, linked to it by an old stairway and a SITA bus. To the north-east, Pontone, a hamlet of Scala, is where the path to the Torre dello Ziro (9) starts.

The harbour and Marina Grande
The Arsenale (3), where the republic built its galleys, opens onto the seafront by Piazza Flavio Gioia, where the SITA buses stop. Beside the piers, Marina Grande (2) is the town beach, and the ferries leave from the piers next to it.

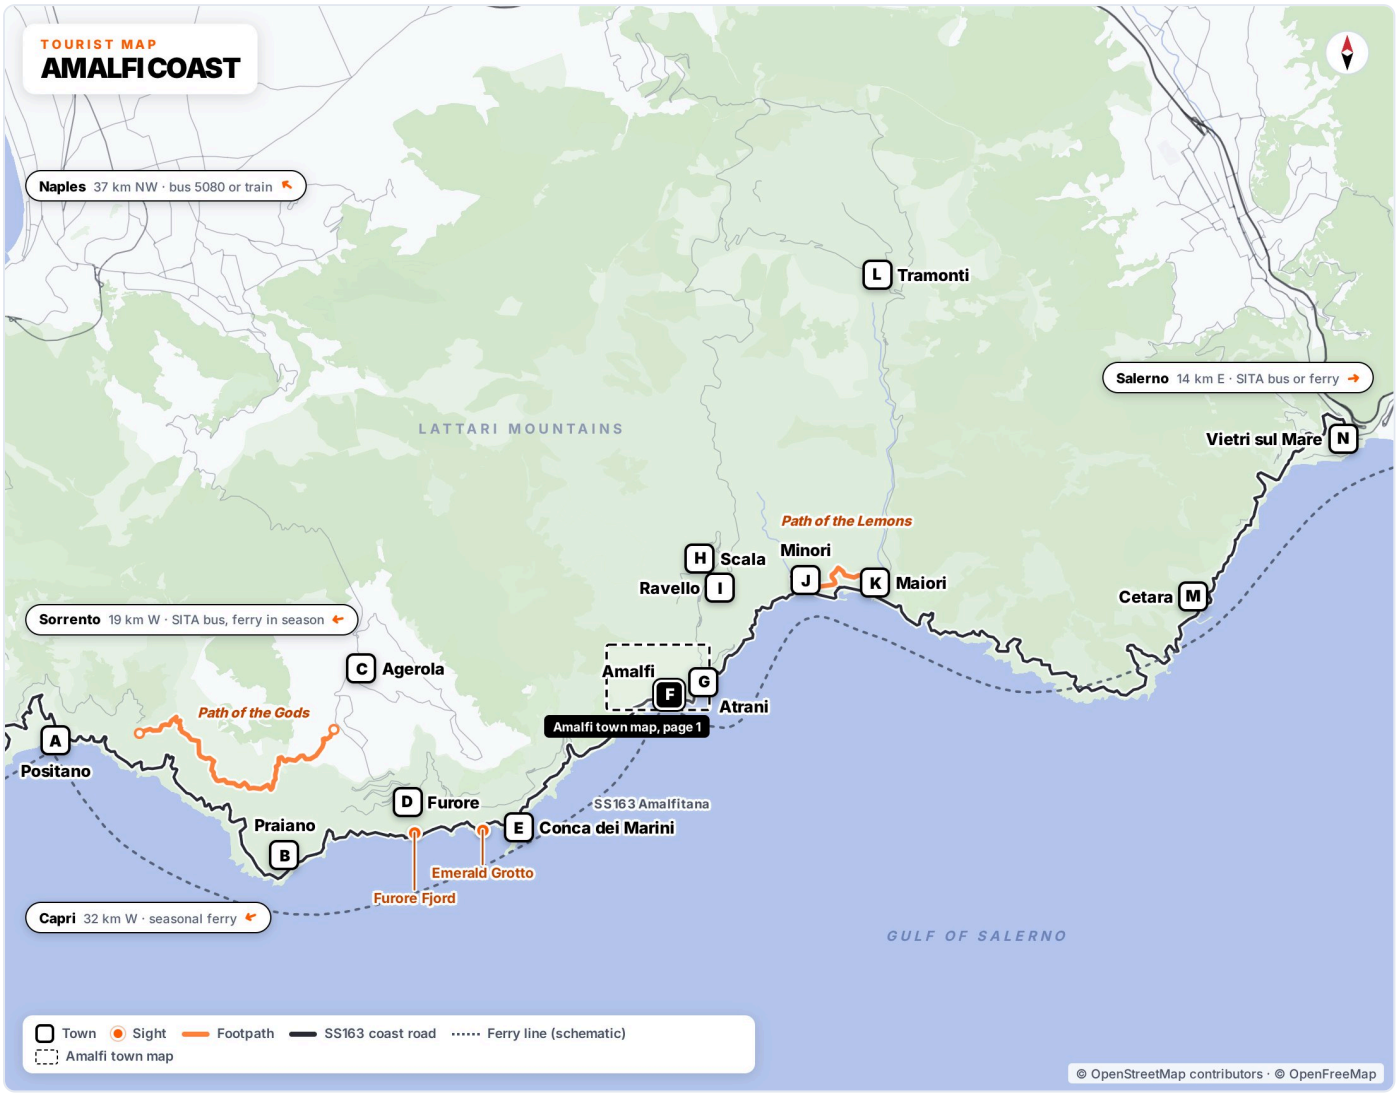

Atrani
Atrani (1) lies in its own cove just east of Amalfi, past a rocky headland, its square opening onto the beach. Above it, the sanctuary of Santa Maria del Bando clings to the rock below the Torre dello Ziro (9).

Ravello
Ravello sits on a ridge high above Atrani and Minori, reached by the SITA bus from Amalfi. Villa Rufolo (10) opens onto its cathedral square, and a lane leads south to the gardens of Villa Cimbrone (11).

The Amalfi Coast

The 13 comuni of the Costiera Amalfitana, on the UNESCO World Heritage List since 1997, and Agerola on the plateau above, where the Path of the Gods starts. Letters run from west to east; the dashed box is the Amalfi town map of page 1.

Towns and sights of the coast

With the letters of the map, from west to east.

A · Positano
Pastel houses climb from the beach up the cliffs, linked to Amalfi by bus and ferry.

Tourist attractions: touristoffice.org/positano/

B · Praiano
Praiano spreads along the cliffs between Positano and Furore, a quiet village whose church of San Gennaro has a majolica-tiled dome and floor.

C · Agerola
Agerola is a town on a plateau of the Lattari Mountains, not one of the 13 comuni of the Amalfi Coast, where the Path of the Gods starts at the hamlet of Bomerano and where fior di latte and provolone are made.

D · Furore
Furore is known as the village that is not there, its houses scattered up the slopes instead of round a square, with murals painted on its walls and the fjord far below.

E · Conca dei Marini
Conca dei Marini is a former fishing village of terraced houses above a small harbour, home of the Emerald Grotto and of the Santa Rosa sfogliatella, by tradition first made in its convent.

F · Amalfi
Amalfi, the seat of a medieval maritime republic, is the hub of the coast's buses and ferries, and its cathedral, paper mills and harbour are on the town map of this guide.

G · Atrani
Atrani, the smallest comune in Italy by area, sits in its own small cove just east of Amalfi, a short walk away past a rocky headland.

H · Scala
Scala, by tradition the oldest town on the coast, sits on a ridge above Amalfi facing Ravello, with its Duomo of San Lorenzo and the hamlets of Pontone and Minuta.

I · Ravello
Ravello's cathedral, begun in 1086, keeps bronze doors installed in 1179, two medieval mosaic pulpits and a museum in its crypt.

J · Minori
Minori is a small beach town below Ravello, known for its handmade pasta and the Basilica of Santa Trofimena, the saint whose relics, by tradition, were carried by the sea to its beach.

K · Maiori
Maiori has the longest beach on the Amalfi Coast, almost a kilometre of sand in front of the town, overlooked by the church of Santa Maria a Mare.

M · Cetara
Cetara is a fishing village with a working tuna fleet, known for colatura di alici, an anchovy sauce matured in small wooden casks.

Emerald Grotto
Found by a fisherman in 1932, this sea cave glows green from light entering below the waterline; a lift or boats reach it.
Conca dei Marini, by lift from the SS163 or by boat

L · Tramonti
Tramonti is an inland comune of 13 hamlets in the Lattari Mountains behind Maiori, with a long tradition of pizza makers.

N · Vietri sul Mare
Vietri sul Mare, at the eastern end of the coast next to Salerno, is known for its hand-painted ceramics, with tiled shopfronts and the majolica dome of San Giovanni Battista.

Furore Fjord
The Schiato stream cuts a narrow gorge to the sea beneath the coast road bridge, with a small beach and an old paper mill.
Furore, below the SS163 bridge

Two footpaths

Path of the Gods
The old mule track from Bomerano, in Agerola, to Nocelle above Positano runs for about 5 km along cliffs high above the sea.
CAI path 327, about 5.3 km and 2 hours from Piazza Paolo Capasso in Bomerano to Nocelle, about 180 m up and 360 m down. From Nocelle a long stairway of 1,500 steps or more drops to Arienzo on the coast road, east of the centre of Positano, and a bus runs from Nocelle to Positano. SITA bus 5080 runs from Amalfi to Bomerano.

Path of the Lemons
A stepped footpath between Maiori and Minori that winds through terraced lemon groves and the hamlet of Torre, with sea views along the way.
About 2 km of lanes and steps between the two towns through the hamlet of Torre, with a climb of about 150 m.

Getting around the Amalfi Coast

- SITA Sud buses leave Amalfi from Piazza Flavio Gioia: west along the SS163 to Conca dei Marini, Furore, Praiano, Positano and Sorrento; east to Minori, Maiori, Cetara, Vietri sul Mare and Salerno; inland to Ravello and Scala; and over Agerola (Bomerano) to Naples on line 5080. The winter timetable runs from 2 November 2026 to 21 March 2027.
- Ferries leave from the piers beside Marina Grande: Travelmar sails to Positano, Minori, Maiori, Cetara, Vietri sul Mare and Salerno (Piazza della Concordia, near the station), and boats to Capri and Sorrento run from about April to early November. Rough seas cancel sailings.
- The SS163 Amalfitana is a narrow cliff road. In 2026 cars of non-residents drove on alternate number plates from 10:00 to 18:00 between Vietri sul Mare and Positano on set dates (every day from 30 March to 6 April, from 25 April to 2 May and in August and September; weekends and holidays in June, July and October); the rule is not in force in November.
- Amalfi has no railway station: Salerno has high-speed and regional trains, the Circumvesuviana runs from Sorrento to Naples, and the small Vietri sul Mare-Amalfi station on the old Naples to Salerno line has regional trains.
- On foot: the Path of the Gods runs about 5.3 km from Bomerano to Nocelle, mostly downhill westbound; the Path of the Lemons links Maiori and Minori in about 2 km of lanes and steps.

Beyond the map

Sorrento 19 km W of Amalfi
Sorrento stands on cliffs over the Bay of Naples on the peninsula named after it, at the far end of the SITA bus line along the coast road from Amalfi, with Circumvesuviana trains to Naples.
touristoffice.org/sorrento/ · touristoffice.org/sorrento-tourist-map/

Capri 32 km W of Amalfi
Seasonal ferries cross from Amalfi's harbour to the island of the Faraglioni rocks and the Piazzetta.
touristoffice.org/capri/

Salerno 14 km E of Amalfi
Salerno, the provincial capital just beyond the eastern end of the coast, is the main railway hub for Amalfi, with high-speed trains to Naples and Rome, and buses and ferries to Amalfi.

Naples 37 km NW of Amalfi
Naples is reached from Amalfi by the SITA bus over Agerola (line 5080), or by bus or ferry to Sorrento or Salerno and then by train.
